

TONY AZEVEDO

American star, Brazilian ambassador

USA Olympic water polo team former captain and Olympic silver medalist Tony Azevedo is one of the best water polo players of all time.

In August 2016, Tony competed with the United States in his fifth consecutive Olympic games in Rio de Janeiro. Tony was raised in the United States, but was born in Rio de Janeiro, the son of a top player on the Brazilian National Team. Thus, Tony's participation marked a full-circle return to his birthplace, and a chance to further connect with Brazil—a nation close to his heart despite his strong leadership with Team USA. While remaining a backbone of support for his American colleagues, Tony has currently chosen to play professionally in Brazil. A member of the club team SESI, he has become a powerful figure both inside and outside the pool. As part of SESI's leadership, he travels to open new school branches in different cities across Brazil. His inspirational talks at these institutions have led many children off the streets and into water polo programs that foster teamwork and development. It follows that while Tony will always be an American water polo star, he has become one of the most prominent athlete ambassadors to Brazil. Both the USA and Brazil will follow him with great interest as he moves into a new era of his career following the 2016 Games.

TONY AZEVEDO

5x Olympian & Silver Medalist

Tony was born in Rio de Janeiro, but his family moved to Long Beach, CA a month after his birth. When he was four, he suffered a near death experience after a fall that severed his trachea and esophagus. Although his heart stopped beating on the operating table for several minutes, doctors were eventually able to revive him. His parents Ricardo and Libby were told he would never be able to play sports due to his sustained injuries at such an early age.

Unwilling to accept this prognosis, Tony pushed against all odds to become a great player and strong leader. During high school and his time at Stanford University, he won 4 CIF State Championships and 2 NCAA titles and became the youngest member of the US Olympic water polo team in 2000 at the age of 18. At Stanford he set NCAA scoring records with an astonishing 332 goals (the past leader had 235) and was the first player to win the prestigious Peter Cutino Award (the Heisman trophy of water polo) four years in a row.

After graduating from Stanford with a degree in International Relations, Tony signed a series of professional water polo contracts in Europe and abroad, leading each team to numerous championship titles.

While he played pro, he also served as Captain of the US National Team and competed in international competitions throughout the year. He has been a member of the past five US Olympic Teams, culminating in a silver medal in Beijing 2008. Team USA had not won a Men's water polo medal since the Silver in the 1988 Summer Games in Seoul.

TONY'S CURRENT GOAL IS TO GROW THE SPORT OF WATER POLO BOTH WITHIN THE USA AND ABROAD.

TEAM USA

(1998-present)

Tony served as captain of the USA national team from 2005- 2016. He has been a member of the team since 1998 and has competed in five Olympics Games.

Because there is no professional water polo league in the United States, Tony and many of his teammates go abroad each year to play for a European or foreign team, with a season that usually runs from September through June (seasons outside of Europe are shorter). This means Tony only trains full-time with the USA National Team during the summer, but he also meets up with his American teammates several times during the season to compete in various competitions.

FAMILY

Tony Azevedo comes from a family of athletes. Thirteen relatives play or have played sports at the highest level, including professional soccer, basketball, baseball and participation in numerous Pan American and Olympic competitions.

Tony's immediate family form what many have called a water polo dynasty. His father, Ricardo, a member of the Brazilian National Water Polo team in his youth, has led Tony as both a coach and a mentor throughout his development in the sport. He has coached around the world and is currently the coach of the Chinese National Team.

His sister Cassie was a star player at Long Beach State University and spent several seasons abroad playing professionally in Italy. And his 3 year old son Cruz is already constantly spotted walking around in a mini Hard Core Sport suit and swimming in any body of water available.
